Dear Colleagues,

Our students want to celebrate Sadbhavana diwas in the college on 1st September.

They would like to give some token of appreciation to the housekeeping staff as well as peons of the college.

For this purpose they are collecting funds.

Your donations (any amount) for this cause would be highly appreciated.

I request the HODs to please assign one person for the collection of funds in their department, incase, I am not available at my desk. Alternately, the faculty/staff can give their donations to me.

Thank you,

Respected teacher,

They say teachers change the world - one child at a time. There's no better day than Teachers' Day, marked on September 5. Here is a short poem for you -

No, you aren't our mother,
 but you care for us each day.
 You see our new accomplishments,
 You help us grow and learn.
 You understand our language,
 and you listen with concern.
 We come to you for comfort,
 and you kiss away our tears.
 We proudly show our work to you,
 and you give us the loudest cheers!

No, you aren't our mother,
 but your role is just as strong.
 You nurture us and keep us safe,
 Though maybe not for long.
 You know someday the time will come,
 when we'll have to part.
 But you know each child you cared for,
 is forever in your heart.

You are a special person,
 You always give your best.
 People will come and leave,
 But your teachings will stay,
 And for every child who has your class,
 Their life is truly blessed.

Thank you for being the torch-bearer of Knowledge and Wisdom.

Happy Teacher's day.

Warm regards,
 V@rsity-Care

Dear Colleagues

I wish all of you, particularly the ladies, Happy Women's Day. I do acknowledge the great contribution of this superior gender, women, in home, office and society at large. I sometimes wonder how women can do so many diverse tasks and still maintain their cool and support everyone in the family.

Let us all give respect to women which they richly deserve.
